VALEDICTORY REMARKS

(MR. CHAIRMAN in the Chair)

MR. CHAIRMAN: Hon. Members, the month-long Winter Session is now coming to an end. I recall, on this date, last month, how warmly and generously you had welcomed me as a part of you, and assured me of your fullest cooperation. Today, I must acknowledge that the understanding shown and the cooperation and support extended by all of you, has been much beyond anyone's expectations. My sincere and grateful thanks for the same. I crave for your continued goodwill and indulgence in future as well.

I had made a solemn promise of equal and respectful treatment to all and had assured of my sincere efforts to make the functioning of this House more productive and more effective. I had also suggested that, henceforth, we should evaluate, at the end of every Session, as to how relevant and fruitful the proceedings have been, from the viewpoint of contribution towards improving governance and public welfare.

Hon. Members, I am happy to say that thanks to your invaluable support, we certainly have achieved considerable and significant success. With sober and dignified conduct of the proceedings, purposeful as well as focussed discussion and debate on important public issues, this august House has been successful in setting up new standards and be a good role model for other elected bodies.
